P-Noy declares truce with Reds

18-day holiday ceasefire starts today

By Christine O. Avendaño and DJ Yap

AMID open conflict between Malacañang and the Supreme Court and with Christmas just around the corner, President Aquino yesterday offered the public a respite from tension on another front.

Mr. Aquino announced yesterday an 18-day holiday ceasefire with the communist New People's Army (NPA) starting today.

The truce from 12:01 a.m. until midnight of Jan. 2, 2012, was recommended by Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Teresita Deles and the Department of National Defense, Mr. Aquino told reporters.

The Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police later issued separate statements directing security forces to suspend offensives "in the spirit of the yuletide season" against the armed wing of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP).

"This will allow PNP maneuver units as well as their adver-

₱1.8-trillion nat'l budget signed

By Christine O. Avendaño

AMID criticism from impeached Chief Justice Renato Corona that he was neglecting the economy and the poor, President Aquino yesterday signed the ₱1.816-trillion national budget for next year, saying he had not forgotten his priorities while his administration was going after those who had failed the people.

The national budget is 10.6 percent bigger than the ₱1.645-trillion budget for this year.

Shortly after signing into law the 2012 national budget, Mr. Aquino said the appropriations were "results-focused" and prioritized the administration's "social contract with the Filipino people."

He said the budget would address the people's basic needs from food and education to health.

The budget, for instance, will set aside ₱39.5 billion for the conditional cash transfer (CCT) program for three million of the poorest households in the country

Bishop welcomes young lovers to 'Simbang Gabi'

By Philip C. Tubeza

IT'S NICE to see young people in love going to church at dawn to attend Simbang Gabi or Misa de Gallo (Mass of the Rooster) but the church is more than just a place to see your beloved, a Catholic bishop reminded the youth yesterday.

Legazpi Bishop Joel Baylon praised the youth for continuing the tradition of attending the predawn Masses culminating on Christmas Eve, but he said they would have more lasting rewards if they went to these services more than just to get a chance to

Corona starts forming top-notch defense team

By Marlon Ramos and TJ Burgonio

CHIEF JUSTICE Renato Corona has begun forming the legal team that will handle his defense at the impeachment trial that is to start in mid-January at the Senate.

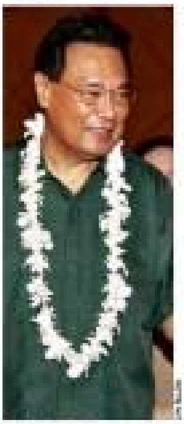

A number of "top-notch" lawyers have offered their legal services to Corona for free, Jose Midas Marquez, the Supreme Court administrator and spokesperson, said yesterday.

But Marquez denied reports that veteran lawyer Estelito Mendoza, who occasionally serves as legal counsel of former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, would lead the Chief Justice's defense.

Earlier yesterday, the Senate formally summoned Corona to respond to the articles of impeachment filed by the House of Representatives against him.

Senate Sergeant at Arms Jose Balajadia, accompanied by staff members of the chamber, brought the summons that included a copy of the 57-page verified complaint to Corona's office.

Aquino: It's Corona who is the dictator

By Norman Bordadora

LOOK WHO'S talking, who's the dictator?

A day after he was accused of attempting to establish a dictatorship, President Aquino yesterday said Chief Justice Renato Corona was being impeached because he had been dictating how government should be run with the Supreme Court's changing interpretations of the law.

"Well, perhaps, that is their position. Let's look at whose actions show whatever," the President told reporters in Malacañang when asked about Corona's allegations that he was dismantling the constitutional system of check and balance among the three branches of government.

"Isn't it when we go to the court, we expect ... fairness and certainty in the law. So, if that

9 in 10 Filipinos upbeat about 2012, says survey

ONLY THREE out of 10 Filipinos believe this Christmas season will be more prosperous than last year but nearly nine in 10 are upbeat about the new year, according to a recent Pulse Asia survey.

The same survey showed that there are fewer Filipinos now, compared to last year, who believe a more prosperous Christmas awaits them.

The results, released yesterday, were part of the November 2011 Ulat ng Bayan national survey conducted by Pulse Asia.

According to the results, 51 percent of 1,200 respondents said their Christmas this year would be no different from last year. Thirty-two said it would be more prosperous while 15 percent said a poorer Christmas is in store for them.

A similar survey last year had said 38 percent believed their Christmas would be more prosperous.

In this year's survey, big decreases were noted in the percentage ...

Same as before

Pulse Asia asked the respondents to complete the statement, "For your family, the coming Christmas will be..." They were made to choose from "more prosperous than last year," "the same as last year" and "poorer than last year."

The noncommissioned survey conducted from Nov. 18 to 28 used face-to-face interviews and had an error margin of plus-minus 3 percentage points at the 95 percent confidence level.

Despite continuing economic difficulties, 88 percent said they looked forward to 2012 with hope ...

... The figures on the new year outlook at the national level and across geographic areas and socioeconomic classes basically remained unchanged from last year, the poll showed. Ana Roa, Inquirer Research

JOY HAS A GREAT FINISH.

Time and again it has been said that to succeed, you must first set out with the end in mind. So, it is paramount to hold only the image of you achieving victory. And to win in the game of golf, it takes more than just imagination and perseverance.

For Maricar Parco, President of Asian Carmakers Corporation, it takes all that, along with a special blend of attributes to make it. "Accuracy, precision, dynamism: these are some of the things that golf requires and are precisely the same characteristics that define the BMW brand." And just last December 5, these were exactly what participants of the BMW Golf Cup International exhibited on the links of Wack Wack Golf and Country Club. Besides being what BMW shares with the illustrious game of golf, it is these key components that helped BMW attain leadership as a brand, and how it maintains its enviable status as a luxury automobile. That's why in celebration of these values, BMW again holds the BMW Golf Cup International, a momentous occasion that draws over 100,000 of the most skilled golf players from 47 countries.

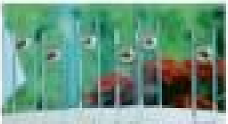

Asian Carmakers Corporation, exclusive distributor of BMW in the Philippines, extends its congratulations to those who've made it through the National Finals, and supports those advancing to the World Finals!

DAVID M. CONSUNJI AT 90:

Game changer, innovation leader

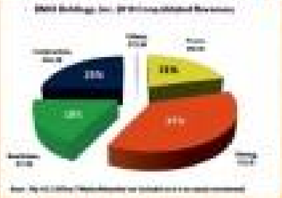

Dreaming Big

Prudent

Working together for economic growth

BACK when Consunji started, he was already dreaming big that after just a few years, his company would become one of the most sought-after builders and the trusted name behind some of the country's landmark chapels, multi-story hotels and condominiums, large commercial complexes as well as irrigation dams, kilometer-long concrete bridges and skyways, power plants, transmission lines and industrial plants.

DMCI Holdings is one of the fast rising conglomerate in the country today.

'Malasakit'

A Running Theme in Consunji's Lifework

ONE might think that working with cement, steel bars, and massive cranes for decades would turn a person into a cold and inflexible automaton, yet for all his successes in the hard-hat field of engineering and construction, David M. Consunji is well known for his strong sense of "malasakit."

In the words of fellow UP alumnus Jose Abueva about Consunji's core values, this isn't the tendency of "going along merely to get along" or dysfunctional pakikisama that some Filipinos fall into. In Consunji's memoir, A Passion to Build, Abueva recalled Consunji's beginnings around the time that the engineer was involved in constructing the iconic dome chapel in UP Diliman. It was the mid-1950s and the young engineer had just composed a creed guided by principles like "public good," "serving humankind," "fair competition," and "construction as a noble profession."

Passion makes due diligence a matter of habit. Once, he quietly picked up surplus cement left lying around on the site, to the slight embarrassment—but understanding as well—of the engineer under him who had overlooked it. [illegible] Malasakit or [illegible] is something Consunji lived or made by example and by word.

It is a way of thinking and doing that goes beyond the self and the here and now. In the UP Diliman College of Engineering, he is revered as a "distinguished, loyal, and generous alumnus," according to Abueva. His strong insistence on learning would take official form in 2009 through the DM Consunji Technical Training Center (DMCI-CTTC), a training institution of the Consunji group of companies that provides technical training for its own people and the construction industry. It is not merely a natural progression in the development of a company but institutionalizing what the founder has been doing all these years: helping build competency and character brick by brick so that his people can contribute to nation-building.

'Malasakit' begins at home

Consunji's malasakit is concrete that sometimes [illegible] roads, dams, bridges, and skyways. But the virtue finds its best form at home. "Where is Papa Con?" is the first question his grandchildren ask whenever they visit, says wife and college sweetheart, Fredy. Fredy considers her marriage to him the best decision of her life. "He remains a wonderful provider, to me he is almost a perfect husband."

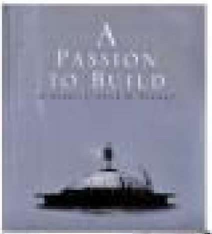

He "allowed me to hope," shares Jorge Consunji, one of the children who is now president of DM Consunji, Inc., as he reflects on his father's legacy. "What began as building houses became erecting buildings, and then railways and ports. Now we just don't build houses, we create urban residential villages with [illegible] spaces and light. From construction we've gone into developing urban communities. Mining coal and nickel, constructing complex edifices, investing in utilities [illegible] to our company mission and vision, we are contributing to nation-building by creating jobs, urban communities, and sharing our bounty. Very few can claim with pride that the identity of the founder and the corporation are synonymous, as DMCI."

The company founder likes to say that the humble cement maker is his [illegible], and talks of "falling in love with construction" - words of a man [illegible] by choices and circumstances. A colleague in DMCI Mining, Cesar F. Simbulan Jr. puts it well. "Success is best measured not by the number of achievements one makes but by the number of lives one touches, and Consunji has done well in both."

The deep sense of malasakit that David M. Consunji integrated into the landmarks and structures he helped build will be remembered through generations to come.

Cathay may soon fly out of Clark

Carrier wants direct flights to HK, other cities in China

By Paolo G. Montecillo

HONG KONG'S Cathay Pacific, one of the world's largest airlines, may soon flying out of the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport (DMIA) in Clark Freeport, Pampanga.

Clark Development Corp. president and CEO Felipe Yap said officials from the Chinese airline were in town earlier this week to discuss the possibility of daily flights from Clark.

"They are considering direct flights to Hong Kong and other cities in China. They want daily flights," he said in an interview yesterday.

The largest

If plans push through, Cathay Pacific would be the largest airline to fly out of Clark, which is being groomed as the next premiere international gateway to replace the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (Naia) in Metro Manila.

DMIA is currently used mainly by local and international budget carriers.

Cebu Pacific of the Gokongwei group has named Clark as one of its three major hubs in the country, the other two being Manila and Cebu.

Malaysian giant Air Asia, through its newly formed subsidiary Air Asia Philippines, and Southeast Asian Airlines (SEAir), have also chosen Clark for their own hubs.

Several foreign airlines also call Clark their home in the Philippines.

These include Korea's Asiana Airlines. Yap said the increase in flights to Clark would help decongest Naia, which is struggling with aging facilities and rapidly increasing passenger traffic.

More convenient

He said Clark is also a more convenient facility for people living in northern parts of Metro Manila all the way to provinces like Tarlac, Pangasinan and Ilocos, among others.

"If you look at that catchment area, it accounts for about 25 million people. If someone living there needs to take a flight out of the country it will be better to get to Clark than to go all the way to Pasay," he said.

Cathay Pacific will be taking advantage of the government's adoption of an "open skies" policy, which is part of the administration's strategy to increase tourist arrivals to the Philippines.

'Open skies'

The "open skies" policy, outlined by President Aquino in Executive Order 29 which was signed earlier this year, liberalizes the granting of international air rights for all points outside of Manila.

The government now expects to attract 10 million tourists annually to the Philippines by 2016.

This was a revision from the previous target of six million. Last year, just over three million foreigners visited the Philippines.

FRIENDLY REMINDERS THIS HOLIDAY SEASON

BRIGHT NOW! DO RIGHT. BE BRIGHT.

DOE

1. Replace your old traditional holiday lights with Light-Emitting Diode (LED) light strings.
   Although they may cost more initially, LEDs use a fraction of the energy of traditional holiday lights. Plus, they last up to 20 years.

2. Before hanging holiday lights, check for damaged sockets, plugs and cords. Replace anything that looks defective.

3. Rather than adding more lights to your tree, try enhancing the existing lighting with tinsel, mirrored ornaments and other reflective items.

   Don't use light-duty flat extension cords, to power your lights.
   Instead, use heavy-gauge and marked extension cords.

4. To avoid overloading electrical circuits, never plug in more than three sets of Christmas lights to one extension cord.

   Never run electrical cords under rugs or carpets.

5. Don't let small children play with light strings.

6. If you plan to use string lights outdoors, be absolutely certain they are marked for outdoor use.

7. If you use a ladder when decorating outside, stay well away from power lines.
   The same can be said for lights; do not place them near power lines.

8. Fasten outdoor lighting securely to your home's exterior to protect the lights from wind damage.
   Use only insulated staples or plastic attachments to hold strings in place, not nails, or tacks.

9. Turn off electrical decorations before leaving home or going to bed.

More than 100 Automobile Association Philippines (AAP) members and friends in 37 cars joined AAP's Ilocos Norte Drive Tour Caravan last month not only to go sightseeing in Region 1, but also to gather signatures for the Decade of Action for Road Safety Pledge. The AAP Caravan to the Solid North was organized by AAP Director and Tourism Committee Chair Mina Gabor with the cooperation of Region 1 local government officials and Department of Tourism (DoT) Region 1 Director Martin Valera, who was one of her executives during her term as DoT Secretary.

Fueled by Pilipinas Shell Petroleum, which provided complimentary full tanks of gas for all the vehicles at flag-off in Manila and before leaving Laoag three days later, the 37 vehicles were divided into two groups, with the first group led by a Ford Everest SUV and the second by a Ford Focus TDCi compact hatchback. Two Ford Fiesta subcompacts served as sweep cars. Immediately behind the Everest was Mina Gabor in a Great Wall Haval SUV, followed by AAP Director Aida Sevilla Mendoza, three journalists and an AAP driver in a Hyundai Grand Starex Limousine. Next were Malaysian Ambassador and Mrs. Dato Seri Dr. Ibrahim Saad in a Mercedes-Benz E250, Pakistan Ambassador and Mrs. Mohsin Razi in a Volvo S80, Greek Ambassador Polyxeni Stefanidou and her husband, a retired war admiral, in a Nissan Teana 250XV and Brunei Ambassador Mahdi Rahman Yusof, the Embassy's Second Secretary and other staff members in a Toyota Corolla and Toyota Fortuner.

PERFECT AVENUE. The four diplomats and their entourage participated in the pledging sessions together with the local government officials, their staff and the AAP Caravan participants. During the first pledging session and the first stop at the Pangasinan Provincial Capitol Complex in Lingayen, Vice Governor Jose Ceballos said: "This advocacy initiated by AAP was a perfect avenue to promote the local tourism of Ilocos and at the same time discover the hidden treasures of the province."

The Pangasinan officials welcomed the AAP Caravan with a cultural presentation of local dances and songs and hosted lunch at the huge, newly renovated Sison Auditorium in the Capitol Complex. After Lingayen, the next stop was the La Union Provincial Capitol in San Fernando, La Union for another Road Safety Pledging led by Governor Manuel Ortega and Vice Governor Aureo Nisce, DoT Region 1 Director Valera, the Provincial Board members and transport group leaders also took and signed the pledge, after which they received from Ms. Gabor and the other AAP directors the symbolic Decade of Action for Road Safety tag designed for the United Nations as a reminder of their promise to be safe road users.

Before proceeding to Laoag to check into the Plaza del Norte Hotel, the AAP caravan made a brief stop in Vigan to take photos of Ilocos Sur's splendid historical cathedral. Early the next morning, the third and last Road Safety Pledge

Capitol Commons to breathe life to Pasig's heart

Prime development project will foster energized economic growth

THE NEWEST mixed-use real estate development project to hit Metro Manila's landscape in a big way is Capitol Commons, heralded by property developer Ortigas & Co. as another landmark project. To rise on the 10-hectare site of the former Rizal Provincial Capitol, this project will be expected to put Pasig City firmly on the expanded metropolis' business district map.

Adjacent to the northern end of the Ortigas Business District, at the crossroads of Shaw Boulevard and Meralco Avenue, Capitol Commons is at the very heart of Pasig City, and is straddled by Quezon City in the north and Makati in the south. Its first structure, a high-end shopping mall, is targeted for completion next year.

Capitol Commons will have 35,000 square meters of prime retail space, 35,000 square meters of office space for knowledge process outsourcing companies, and over 200,000 square meters of residential units. Over 50 percent of the land area would be allocated for open spaces.

Beginnings

Capitol Commons is an integrated mixed-use development that will feature modern living spaces, office facilities, and commercial areas that showcase premium retail and entertainment selections. It is anchored by an urban park, and is intended to be the next address of change in the Ortigas Business District and Pasig City.

A comprehensive master-planning process produced a project that features stunning architecture, allowing strong and meaningful elements of Filipino culture to blend with brilliant and modern execution. The project is poised to set a new standard for modern urban development in the area.

At Capitol Commons, a range of aspirations is expected to unite families, young people, and visitors to build a vibrant new community that will pave the way for a new generation of Filipinos.

The site's master development plan calls for an investment of close to P25 billion over a period of 10 years, and will involve the construction of office, retail, residential spaces as well as cinemas, a hotel, and a park to anchor the property.

"Capitol Commons would have the first high-end shopping mall in Pasig City and we are glad to be contributing to its economic growth. In cooperation with the Pasig local government and Hon. Mayor Bobby Eusebio, Ortigas has pledged to build a road on the Meralco side of its property to essentially widen Meralco Avenue, thus easing traffic. The public would be able to benefit from a widened Meralco Avenue in the second quarter of 2012," says Jory Santos, Ortigas & Co. real estate division general manager.

Retail

Rising within Capitol Commons is Estancia, a high-end shopping mall that will house a delectable array of restaurants, service and convenience retailers, as well as unique international fashion brands. The jewel of Capitol Commons will be integrated into the central park, with connections to the rest of the development via pedestrian-friendly walkways.

Three to five floors above the shopping mall will accommodate BPO companies. Three basement level parking spaces will allow for as much as 750 slots. Estancia at Capitol Commons broke ground this December with the targeted date of completion on 2013.

Residential

Completing the residential side of the development are five premier towers designed for a privileged lifestyle consisting of fine living, amenities, and convenience. First to rise is the Royalton, having 41 residential floors, which have a mix of studio, one- and two-bedroom layouts.

Ortigas & Co. has 80 years of experience in property development and shopping center management. It is the company behind Metro Manila's well-known shopping destinations such as Greenhills Shopping Center and Tiendesitas, as well as longstanding central developments like the Greenhills Subdivision, Greenmeadows, and Valle Verde.

'Uniqueness is luxury's new frontier'

Ferragamo creative director Massimiliano Giornetti says, 'After years of everyone dressing identically, today's customers are willing to invest in solid items that will accompany them season after season'

By Cheche V. Moral

HOW CAN a designer know what will please the critics and keep the tills ringing at the same time—at all times?

This is a question that has nagged many a fashion industry insider in the past year, as focus has been placed on the perceived pressures imposed by luxury mega brands on the shoulders of its star designers.

Amid the hype and buzz, media speculates that big-name designers are finding it harder and harder to meet the expectations of their financiers. They're not only expected to create critically successful collections every six months—not counting pre-season collections—but bring in profits as well.

"The status quo in the world of fashion has changed a lot recently: only a few years ago, designers could still choose to live in their ivory towers and dictate trends that consumers would follow slavishly," says Massimiliano Giornetti, creative director at Salvatore Ferragamo. "It's not like that anymore."

Critics' nods

While not (yet) a star designer in the mold of Marc Jacobs, Stefano Pilati or Raf Simons, Giornetti is a veteran in global luxury fashion with a rising reputation.

Why did you feel that this message was important to share, as a Filipino entering an international short film competition?

I believe this is an important point to share not just for Filipinos, but for everyone around the world. I'd also like to share the film as encouragement to the Filipino people, just because our country is going through a rough time doesn't mean that there is no God. I believe that these issues shouldn't take us away from Him, but it should bring us closer to Him.

How did your own faith influence the making of your short film?

The whole journey of this short film, from the writing, to the awards ceremony, was a journey of faith. It was a global competition with entries from the world over and there were some great entries out there.

What was the experience of winning like?

It felt great when I won, of course! The people in my category had really good entries. I am just very grateful that I won. Tony Blair is such a fine gentleman. He's very humble, and I was honored to meet him. I also had the chance to meet Lord David Puttnam. I was starstruck when I met him. He is one of the people I look up to in the industry. He told me to savor this moment well, but get back to work as soon as possible.

A JOURNALIST interviews a young boy about his sickness

PAULO Reyes in London to attend the Faith Shorts Awards ceremony

What's next for you?

Now that I'm back at home, I've already shifted to work mode. It was great winning the competition, but doing nothing won't get me to my next competition. I do plan to make more films, with faith possibly being a recurring theme. I see myself making more films. I don't think I'm going to stop anytime soon. I'd like to do this fulltime and hopefully get a nice job right after graduating.

What's your advice to fellow film students and budding filmmakers?

The best way to start working towards becoming a filmmaker is to start making films. One can tell stories through a whole variety of mediums, but the best way to start is to actually take that first step and just do it. Passion is required if you want to master your craft. And always try to stay inspired. Go out for a nice walk, talk to people, read books. And finally stay humble. Talent can get you places, but it's character that will keep you there.

Middle book syndrome

By Raul S. De Vera

DYSTOPIA GETS darker as the story goes on. Ally Condie's Matched trilogy which hit the ground running with 2010's "Matched," was a promising, gripping book. Of all the ambitious young adult series that tried to follow in the boot prints of Suzanne Collins' Hunger Games books, "Matched" came the closest without actually straight-out copying elements from Collins' trilogy, the final chapter of which will be in theaters next year.

The biggest difference was that "Matched" was more a romance with a sci-fi setting rather than being sci-fi books with romantic subplots, which the Hunger Games books were. That quality is carried over to the second book in "Crossed" (Dutton Books, New York, 2011, 367 pages).

In the future, everything is controlled by the powerful Society, even who you'll marry (you are Matched when you're 17) and when you die (everyone dies at 80 whether they like it or not). During her Matching ceremony, Cassia Reyes was delighted to see the handsome face of her friend Xander Carrow... but then the image changed and she saw instead the enigmatic visage of Ky Markham. But unlike Cassia who is a Citizen, Ky is an Aberration, someone who does not belong in the Society. Cassia wants to just undo her feelings and tries to stick to the plan, but she can't forget Ky.

Now, Ky has been banished to the dreaded Outer Provinces to die. But Cassia, determined to be reunited with Ky, gets herself declared an Aberration so that she can be sent to the Outer Provinces as well. But will she be able to get there in time? No one ever comes back from the Outer Provinces.

"Crossed" lets the reader know immediately that Cassia and Ky are at the heart of the book because instead of merely being told by Cassia (as "Matched" was), "Crossed" is told in alternating chapters by both Cassia and Ky. Cassia ventures something more dangerous and vulnerable, while readers become acquainted with the grim Ky who seeks to find out more about his true background, among the mysterious Anomalies, the only thing worse than being an Aberration, those who choose to flee away from the Society on purpose. "Eighty. Do you think it's worth it," someone asks them. "We have no choice, but to live nothing."

"Crossed" has the unenviable task of getting all the dramatic and expository pieces set for the grand finale, the yet untitled third book due in November 2012. In the process, a lot of stuff has to happen and so Cassia and Ky are swept up in the book's relentless dramatic currents. We learn a lot more about the Uprising but there are themes even more about what the Society is really up to. Cassia, who wants to join up with the rebels, risks all that she has to find Ky. "In that moment I realized that losing each other felt more dangerous—more like a rebellion—than anything else ever could." Cassia and Ky find themselves in an unexpected place due to a couple of late chapter revelations that hit the novel like blows to the solar plexus. "Crossed" ends with a wistful, ambiguous scene that is the saltiest cliffhanger you've seen.

A lot more questions are asked than answered with Cassia and Ky being put through their paces in "Crossed," as the book has just enough intrigue to keep its readers hoping Ally Condie has all the answers when the last chapter of the Matched trilogy arrives next year. But now, hang on and keep the red and blue tablets handy.

Available in paperback from National Book Store.

BACKSTAGE PASS

Isabel Fleces

CHRISTMAS is fast approaching and the season's wet weather shouldn't dampen one's desire to look sexy cool. The best way to look scorching hot during the holiday parties is by sporting glimmering bronzed skin!

While there was probably a time in your life when you loved the sun and great outdoors, with long pages exposure to sun... cafés, theaters are the only light you're getting these days is from the fluorescent lamp above your desk. It's an ongoing give-and-take with the sun and hot weather hitting the country. Sometimes we get a lot of sun. And other days? Eh, not so much.

There's no denying makeup should be fun and uplifting come rain or shine, but that doesn't mean it has to be so difficult to apply. That's why I've once again turned to makeup maven Bianca Valerio, to show us how great makeup can, in fact, be done at home, and getting great bronzed skin can be done even without the sun.

Our subject, Trixie Reyes, spends her days cooped in the office but wishes she could light up a room with a golden glow just like Jlo in her "On the Floor" music video. To achieve her look, Bianca gives us five tips to achieve a faux sun-kissed sexy glow:

1. If you wish to have a slimmer, more toned face and physique, stick to matte bronzers or faux tanners. Shimmers only reflects light, therefore bringing out the areas you applied the product to and making them appear larger.

2. Apply bronzer (liquid, powder or spray) to exposed areas from neck, to arm and arms, even feet if you're wearing sexy open toed heels. Consistency is key.

3. Opt for a bronzer that has golden tones to look natural. Reddish or copper-toned bronzers are best on skin with pink undertones. Asians, like Filipinos, have golden undertones.

4. Go monochromatic with the eye shadow palette. Bronze, gold, warm taupes, browns, camels, nudes, chocolate and cream tones complement your skin's golden glow by adding depth.

5. If you've already got hyper-glimmering skin from shimmer or bronzers, tone down the glimmer of your lips for a balanced look. A nice velvety, satin lip color finish is more flattering and sophisticated.

When it comes to holiday makeup, "dolling yourself" up in the spirit of the season may take a toll on your skin. Piling on mounds of makeup clogs our pores, making it dry and hard for skin to breathe, thus causing breakouts days after.

So, in between the festivities, let's not forget our beauty regimen. Try the newly released Neutrogena Hydro Boost line. Its intense hydration revitalizes dry and tired skin caused by moisture-snatchers that suck our skin dry during the holiday rush, with all its back-to-back Christmas celebrations, hours exposed to air-conditioning, unhealthy glamour, and smoking and drinking.

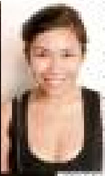

Hydrate and give your skin the boost it needs, and party with an irresistible bronzed look that will make the men light up faster than a Christmas tree.

Try these

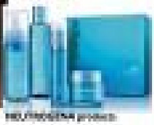

- Neutrogena Hydro Boost Mousse Cleanser: It cleanses and balances the skin's moisture level. The rich lather foams away impurities, while a special hydrating agent restores skin's natural moisture balance. For day and night use (150 ml P495.50)
- Neutrogena Hydro Boost Clear Lotion (Toner) immediately tones and refines skin without causing tightness. It gives you a shower of fresh hydration for a dewy complexion. Use after cleansing, both day and night (150 ml/P495)
- Neutrogena Hydro Boost Water Gel is purified Hyaluronic Acid and Olive Extract that continuously releases moisture to the skin's surface while boosting the skin cell's ability to retain water. For day and night use after Hydro Boost Clear Lotion (50 g/P850)
- Neutrogena Hydro Boost Essence is intensely moisturizing and deeply revitalizing. This rich essence has powerful hydration properties to keep skin plump, bouncy and supple. For day and night use, for those with very dehydrated skin. Use after the Clear Lotion and before the Water Gel (30 ml/P995)

Chito Vijandre returns to fashion triumphantly. Cesar Gaupo and Philip Rodriguez reaffirm their strengths

By Larry Leviste

CHITO VIJANDRE'S reentry into the fashion scene after an absence of 25 years was nothing short of phenomenal. Here are his haute couture numbers shown at the Tribute to Slim's at 60 held at the recent Philippine Fashion Week. It was like Shanghai in the '30s, with Art Deco colors and geometric silhouettes; the colors were vivid in brocade, voiles, gold mesh; and the accessories echoed the treasures found in Vijandre's Firma, the very famous boutique.

Shopping Alley — A LIFESTYLE GUIDE

What's IN with corporate giveaways

Firmus Inc.

Cross Wings Marketing

By Joel V. Migue

Bags of all shapes, colors and sizes, tech-related products, personal accessories, tumblers, mugs, T-shirts, and small merchandise either for office or personal use, are the hit and the most in-demand items this season of giving, according to suppliers of these corporate giveaways who perhaps have already delivered most of these gift items to the companies that ordered them.

"Over the years, bags are our best-selling product due to its practical use. According to our clients, they get positive feedback from their customers. Many think that bags are very expensive, so once they receive it, customers really feel valued," shares Ann Lim Bautista, owner of Firmus Inc.

Bautista says that among the various bags that her company supplies, the promotional tote is the most saleable this year. Orders, she says, are usually given by companies at the start of the last quarter for delivery for the gift-giving Christmas season. Backpacks, traveling bags as well as sling bags are also popular.

"Orders are usually based on the budget of the client, which most often depends on the client's annual income," Bautista adds.

Cecille Lu, proprietor of Ask Trading also shares Bautista's experience. She adds that her company often customizes gift items to suit the client's budget.

Lu says that they usually have gift items that are for general consumption as well as the mid-level and VIPs.

"The difference lies in the materials that we use for the gift items. Of course, all of them are of good quality. Bags intended for the VIPs, for example, are usually made of genuine leather.

Bautista says: "We use alternative materials like poly canvas instead of twill to make it affordable. We can also lessen the number of pockets and zippers to make it more affordable."

Michael Chengbe, president and CEO of Cross Wings Marketing, says that despite budget constraints, they still make sure that the gift items are of good quality.

"We give our clients their needs for quality but fairly priced items and we give assurance to on-time delivery," he says.

Tech-related items such as USB, note pads, pens, pins, keys, ID holders, various kinds of bags-vanity bags, pouch bags, laptop bags, carry-all bags, shopping bags-also make it as the most in-demand giveaways this season.

JAG, SHE'S IT!

LINDSAY LOHAN

SHOWS OFF IN JAG JEANS

JAG Jeans unleashes the most intriguing celebrity fashion endorser to date, THE Lindsay Lohan.

Towering above the busiest spots in EDSA, Lindsay Lohan flaunts her larger-than-life persona (on and off cam) garbed in JAG's raw, rebellious, and remarkably well-constructed denim jeans as all Manila took notice. Some saw the boldest fashion move to date. Lohan fans went viral, and style-watchers think it's a grand meeting of kindred souls.

HOLLYWOOD BAD GIRL

Lindsay Lohan started acting at age 10, embarking on a roller-coaster ride of Disney films, recording contracts, and tons of Hollywood gossip rag covers. What was once a little charmer of girly saccharine features who has been a twin, a mean girl, a teenage drama queen, and a world-renowned Herbie racer, now became the cover girl for superstar excess—filled with red-carpet entrances and quite a lot of red-faced exits.

Yet, despite Lindsay Lohan's comings and goings, she has evolved from being Hollywood's IT princess to the global icon of breaking the boundaries of celebrity status. Just this month, while she displays juvenile decadence in denim atop Manila skylines for the holidays, she is also gracing the newsstands as International Playboy Magazine's December cover. LiLo (as Lohan is commonly known in the Hollywood circles) fits nicely with controversy as if it were a pair of JAG skinny jeans.

Just as Lindsay Lohan has mastered the art of defiant reinvention, JAG Jeans have built on a style status of straightforward hard-wearing reputation rather than fleeting manufactured image. For decades, JAG has been the denim of choice for the innovative and revolutionary Filipino youth who are not afraid of individuality and creative expression, often wearing their JAG denims out with life's various rips and tears. Known especially for their durable denims and enduring designs, JAG's long roster of endorsers vary from the renegade to the rebellious, the wild and the wilful, all displaying the brand's long-standing tradition of earnest, fresh and unapologetic brand integrity.

So now, people should stop wondering how Lindsay Lohan got her groove backing up in a pair of ultra-tight JAGs. Or why JAG snagged Hollywood's hottest headliner as its endorser? Like a fit of a good pair of jeans, one can't get a little tight without going full of the field.

CHRISTMAS TIME AT TUTUBAN COMMERCIAL CENTER

There is no doubt that Christmas 2011 is just around the corner as Tutuban Commercial Center, the country's popular bargain shopping hub right at the heart of historic Tondo in Manila, held its traditional Christmas Tree lighting ceremony at the Open Parking area. The breezy and slightly cool night air was filled with anticipation and excitement as the choir sang beautiful Christmas carols and the increasing number of people that surrounded the 35-foot Christmas tree. And as the countdown ended and when the glittering lights were finally turned on, loud cheers came from the hordes of shoppers who eagerly awaited the actual lighting of the Christmas tree, now a most anticipated event at Tutuban Commercial Center. SUBJECT: IMPLEMENTATION AND USE OF PARCEL VERIFICATION AND CERTIFICATION SERVICES USING THE PHILIPPINE LAND REGISTRATION AND INFORMATION SYSTEM IN THE REGISTRIES OF DEEDS.

1.Purpose and Coverage: This Circular is issued for the purpose of prescribing applicable rules, fees, and procedures for the implementation and use of the Philippine Land Registration and Information System ("PHILARIS" or "the System") in providing Parcel Verification and Certification Services in the Offices of the Register of Deeds ("RD" or "RDs") of the Land Registration Authority ("LRA").
